

Alberta Seed Processors Announce SEED SMART™ Scholarship Recipients

December 23, 2021: Lacombe, AB – Three future agriculture leaders are one step closer to achieving their career dreams this Christmas season.

This week, the Alberta Seed Processors announced three official recipients of its 2021/22 SEED SMART scholarships – one more than was originally planned, says ASP President Tom Coppock

“Nurturing the next generation of agriculture leaders in our province is one of the most important things that we can do to secure the future of our industry,” he says. “This year, we had so many impressive applications that the board of directors decided to award one additional scholarship.”

Each year, ASP offers two scholarships, valued at $1,000 each, granted based on a combination of accomplishments which include; but are not restricted to, academic and non-academic, volunteerism, and personal achievements. Applicants must be Canadian citizens enrolled in a Canadian post-secondary institute, with preference given to those studying agriculture- based programs in Alberta.

2021/22 recipients

Shelby-Lyn Richards
Sexsmith, AB

“I’m thanks and honoured for your contribution to my education. My future plans are the return to the Peace Country, where I will advance my career by working with local farmers who inspired my path in agriculture.”

Rianne Harrish
Calmar, AB

“I truly appreciate being chosen as one of the recipients for this scholarship. This will help me as I complete my education and pursue a career in precision agriculture.”

Brody Curtis
Coaldale, AB

“I am extremely grateful to the ASP for this generous contribution to my post-secondary education. After completing my formal education at the University of Lethbridge, it is my intent to achieve a Pag designation and apply my knowledge and skills to the field of agronomy. I look forward to applying both my formal education and practical education to the field of agriculture for many years to come.”
